the Recent Prohibition Defeats in the East-Wedded In Haste.

Boston, June 22.—[By the Associate Press. 1 The Herald will print tomorrow a four-column letter from Gen. Butler, in which he produces facts and official records to prove his charge of cowardice against Admiral Porter during the siege of New Orleans, which charges were made in a public speech in this city last May, and have been the subject of a long controversy between the two principals. Admiral Por-ter has been quoted as saying that one offigive his name.
"There was no officer who ran away,"

"There was no officer who ran away," says Butler, "save Porter or those under his orders." To Porter's statement that he had a letter from Gideon Wells, thanking him for his efforts and saying that but for his (Porter's) exertions, Farragut could not have captured New Orleans, Gen. Butler says that the Wells letter was only drawn out by and founded upon Porter's own false and bombastic report. written and dispatched while he was at Pilottown on the 25th of April. Butler asks why the fact that this report was written 25 miles down the river, away from the forts, was concealed from the Secretary.

In conclusion Butler asys: "I shall never refer to these matters in any future newspaper article, but I have another incident in your career, which, if my good health and pleasure still exist. I may feel it my duty to bring to the attention of the country, in order that people may learn another phase of your charseter more deeply dyed with cowardice and falsehood than the two which I have now considered."

Twenty bodies were recovered today.

R. L. Johnston, Judge of Cambria county, today issued an order closing all salcons and liquor pieces in Johnstown and the surrounding boroughs and townships until otherwise of chered. Unless the order is strictly obeyed, the Court says the licenses of violators will be revoked.

MRS. HAYES NO BETTER. Not Much Hope That She Will Re-

FREMONT O., June 23.—[By the Associated Press.] The condition of Mrs. Hayes tonight is unchanged. She remains in the same semi-conscious state as last night. Dr. Hilbst, the attending physician, makes Dr. Hilbst, the attending physician, makes the above announcement. There is not much encouragement for her recovery. In speaking of the health of Mrs. Hayes, the General last night said that during the past winter both himself and wife had enjoyed betted health than for years. At the time of the health than for years. At the time of the New York centennial both were feeling ex-cellently and continued so for several weeks afterward, but within the past two weeks Mrs. Hayes has been feeling poorly, but no thoughts were entertained of serious illness.

All the children are at the bedside of their mother, and everything is being done that is possible.

BURIED IN THE RUINS. Collapse of a Ricketty Tenement in Boston, June 22.-[By the Associated Press.] A two story wooden house on Fifth street, South Boston, collapsed this morning, burying several people in the ruins. Annie Miller, sged 10, and Thomas Flaherty, aged 13. were taken out dead. Mrs. Hannah Mullen, aged 32, had her leg broken. Edward E. Nolen, aged 13, was severely injured internally, and several were hurt, but not seriously.

The house had been vacant' some time and was condemmed by the inspectors of buildings. The people of the neighbor-hood were in the habit of going there for firewood and had torn away about all of the under-pinning. One of the boys was chop-ping away at a portion of a beam when the house fell.

himself with a towel in his cell.

The murdered family were almost positively identified as Joseph Kurtz and wife and Ed Briggs and wife, well-to-do people of Helena, on a trip to Northen Montana. The little girl is supposed to be a child the party was taking to her parents. Wilbur was arrested in Montana in 1887 for the murder of a cowboy in Wyoming, but broke jail. He was finally captured by the Montana authorities and subsequently acquitted.

MARRIED IN HASTE. Deserted Wife Finds Her Hus-

A Deserted Wife Finds Her Husband in an Incbriate Asylum.
CINCINATI, June 22.—[By the Associated Press.] On the 8th of last October Mrs. Alice Ladd, organist of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church in this pity, married Edward M. Reynolds. She had met him in Chattanooga, and he led her to believe he was tich. After marriage, Mrs. Reynolds gave her husband a check for $4000, and taking this he left her. After a week's search the deserted wife found her husband in an incbriate asylum at San Francisco. She gave him more meney, and in a few days learned that her husband had married again while in California. She at once had him arrested on a charge of bigamy, and she ap plied to the Probate Court here today, through her attorney, for a certified copy of her marriage license.

NOT DISCOURAGED. Mrs. J. Ellen Foster Says Prohibi-tion Will Yet Win.

CHICAGO, June 22.—[By the Associated Press.] Mrs. J. Ellen Foster of Iowa, pre-siding officer of the Women's National Besiding officer of the women's rational re-publican Committee, and well known as a Republican Prohibitionist, was in the city today on her way home from Rhode Island. Speaking of the recent defeats in the East, she said it was new evidence of the "power and extent to which the liquor traffic has degraved the records of this country." She she said it was new evidence of the "power and extent to which the liquor traffic has deprayed the people of this country." She denied that there had been a genuine test in Rhode Island and New Hampshire, but added that in Massachusetts and Pennysivania the contest had been free and fair. "The Republican party in both States," said she, "declared for submission and redeemed its piedges," The campaigns, she said, were necessarily non-pertisan. No political party is responsible for the success or failure of this politico-moral question. The temperance people, Mrs. Foster said, will keep right on in the old lines of moral sussion work, and when the time is ripe and the intolerant assumptions of the iquor power in politics reach a point beyond endurance, an outraged people will sweep this un-American oligarchy from the country. "Prohibition work," said Mrs. Foster, will not be abandoned, as we believe all other legislative remedies to be transient and superficial."

Asked if she was opposed to national prohibition, Mrs. Foster said: "Not at all. I believe it will some time be accomplished, but it will come when the ground has been prepared by State action."

ANOTHER BIG FIRE.

DISASTROUS BLAZE AT VAN-COUVER, WASH.

Four Blocks of Business Buildings in Ashes-The Fire the Work of an Incendiary-Losses and Insurance.

By Telegraph to The Times.

PORTLAND (Or.), June 22.—[By the Associated Press.] At an early hour this morning fire swept through the business portion of Vancouver, Wash., destroying the principal part of four blocks of frame buildings lying east and west of Main street. The loss is between $50,000 and $60,000. The insurance is small, and mostly in Seattle companies. There were two fires during the night, both undoubtedly incendiary.

At 11 o'clock last night a watchman near the old Catholic Church, about half a mile the old Catholic Church, about half a mile from 'the business center of town, dis-covered fiames in the ruins. According to his statement, the fiames burst up like wild-fire, and the smoke was heavy with the odor of burning petroleum. He gave the slarm, and the city fire department, as well as that from the survivos.

erful streams were soon thrown on the fire from the east from bydrants of the Govern-ment water-works. This checked the flames in that direction, and enabled the other firemen to confine their, efforts to the west, north and south, and at 5 o'clook, when the Portland engine, with Chief Morgan and Fire Commissioner Storey, arrived on the steamer Oklahoma only the ruins were blazing fitfully.

The Portlanders soon had a stream play-ing from the river, enabling the Van-couver firemen to take a much needed rest.

ing from the river, enabling the Van-couver firemen to take a much needed rest. Among the losses is the Commercial Bank and Odd #Fellows' Hall, damaged about $15,000. This is the brick building which stopped the progress of the flames north.

which stopped the progress of the finances north.

Two prisoners in the city jail were removed only with great difficulty. Goods and furniture in houses several blocks from the burned district were carried into the streets by the projectificker residents.

burned district were carried into the streets by the panic-stricken residents.

While the fire was raging a wild rumor was afloat about somebody having been caught while cutting the hose and taken to jail. There was no foundation for it.

The losses fail mainly upon the poorer classes of shopkeepers, a number of whom lost their all. One large family escaped without shoes or stockings. There will be some suffering, but outside help will hardly be required.

some suffering, out outsite they are considered.

The latest news from Vancouver places the estimated loss by the fire at $53,000. The insurance will not exceed $15,000. The space swept over by the flames is about four acres. There were but few insurance risks in the burnt district held by Oregon companies or insurance companies represented in Partland.

Portland.

A special meeting was held by the City Council soon after the fire, and six extra policemen put on duty. A mass-meeting of citizens will be held on Monday evening to consider measures for the future safety and welfare of the city. Steps will be taken to rid the place of all suspicious characters.

Another Trust Being Formed. WHEELING (W. Va.), June 22.-Large WHEELING (W. Va.), June 22.—Large manufacturers of queensware and china, including those of New Jersey, West Virginia and Ohlo, are endeavoring to form a trust. The leading pottery operators of the country have been in consultation in this city for a number of days. All that is lacking now is a plan which will secure the cooperation of all concerns in the line of trade affected.

A Chess-player's Prize. brilliant game of the contest played be-tween Steinitz and Tchigorin at Havana, in January and February last, has been awarded to the eighth game, which was won by Steinitz.

Forty-five Thousand People Witness the Great Race.

The Winner Given a Saddle of Ro -The Race Worth $18,000 to the Winning Nag's Owner -Other Events.

By Telegraph to The Times.
CHICAGO, June 22.—[By the Associated Press.] Forty-seven thousand people paid their money at the gates of Washington Park today, and then saw Spokane win the American Derby worth $18,000. Spokane had been favored by far the most turfmen, still other horses had their backers. Proctor had been favored by far the most turfmen, still other horses had their backers. Proctor Knott, though defeated on more than one field, was not considered diagraced, and many thousand dollars were staged upon his ability to win the race. Don Joeé, too, was also considered by many to have every bit as good a chance as Spokane. There was also a strong tip on Once Again. As the time of the race drew near the noise made by the bookmakers grew louder and louder, and the odds were cried in vociferous tones on every hand. The rush about the betting booths was enormons, and hundreds of people were unable to get within 50 feet of a bookmaker. Spokane was a het favorite at 6 to 5, though large sums of money were also bet on nearly every other horse in the race. Nearly $1,000,000 changed hands on the result. The race was an exciting one, because the tremendous crowd made it so. No great show was made in the preliminary parade, in which each of the contestants looked fit to compete for the valuable stakes. Sorrento was first on the track; then Proctor Knott appeared, and was followed by Long Dance, Don José. Retrieve and Once Again. Last came Spokane. During the three beak-aways Proctor Knott broke in the front each time, plainly showing that Bryant's Disappointment was to be the pace-maker.

THE GEEAT RACE.

When the flag fell to an excellent start.

THE GREAT RACE. When the flag fell to an excellent start, Once Again was in front, followed by Sor-rento, Don José, Proctor Knott, Long rento, Dob José, Proctor Knott, Long Dance, Retrieve and Spokane in the order named. The "Daredevil" immediately plied the whip and Knott shot ahead like a flash, Once Again being taken back by Murphy. The pace was fast and all seemed content with their positions, which down the stretch and past the stand were not changed, except that for a moment Don José made a spurt. Knott had an advantage of two lengths over the others, who were well bunched with Spokane bringing up the rear under Kiley's strong pull. Knott lost some of his lead, and at the three-quarter pole Sorrento was gaining. Then

SPOKANE MADE HIS RUN. last quarter he was actually leading Knott had already failen into taing piace. Again Sorrento advanced, but though stronger than those behind, he could not disturb Spokane, who came away under Kiley's upraised hand, but without tasting whip or spur, and won very easily by a full length. Sorrento was second, a head before Retrieve third, followed by Don José, Long Dance, Once Again and Proctor Long Dance, Once Again and Proctor Knot. The latter, cut up and very tired, stopped at a saddling paddock, and was taken to his stable, while the crowds hurrahed, and the band played as a saddle of roses was placed upon the winner's haunches.

So much money came down from the Northwest that Spokane went to the post a heavy favorite at 6 to 5. The other closing odds were: Knott, 2 to 1; Don José, 4 to 1; Once Again, 6 to 1; Sorrento, 8 to 1; Long Dance and Ratrieva, 30 to 1 each Dance and Retrieve, 30 to 1 each.

The official time of the Derby was 2:41½.

AFTER THE RACE.

When Spokane reached his stall he was almost mobbed by the Montana stables' frepsred attendants, who clung about his neck and would not allow him to rest until Trainer Rodgap had shouted himself hoarse. He was rubbed down and lightly fed, and as the sun went down the stable boys gathered under his shed and told of the great horse's prowess.

A lusty darky placed a big pot on a fire and filled it with small white leaves, taken from a beg. It was a medicine man's lifegiver, and was being prepared for Spokane's next meal. Shortly a tall red-faced man, with a brown beard, and with his hands thrust clumsly in his trousers' pockets, sauntered along the stable path. It was Sam Bryant, on his way to his own stalls. As he passed the Montana stables he was attracted by the leughter and loud talk, and turning in that direction, saw the big darky stirring the steaming mass in the pot, his mouth stretched into a broad grin, and as he stirred and added the white leaves, he sang, the only intelligible words being: "Spoke! My Spoke!" Sam Bryant sighed: a tear glistened in his eye, and he continued his way to join Prootor Knott.

BANTA'S WILL.

MORE TESTIMONY AS TO THE OLD MAN'S SANITY

When He Went to Church, Just Before Leaving for Ohio, the Goats Followed Him-His Physician Gives Some Strong Testimony.

A matronly-looking woman with brilliant eyes and ruddy complexion was the first witness yesterday morning in the Banta will case, on trial before Judge Clark. She is Mrs. Ruth Hayhurst, wife of Rev. Mr. Hayhurst, who led the counsel such a merry dance on cross-examination the day before.

to, and said he liked to talk with him about Ohio.

After consultation, considerable cumnlative evidence was eliminated, and several depositions were read. Among them was that of Dr. O. Prentiss, 68 years of age, of Norwalk, O., who knew Isaac Banta from 1854 till his death. He was well acquainted with Banta; saw him frequently and did business with him. He never saw any-thing that indicated insanity, and con-sidered him a sane man all the time he knew him, up to a day or two be-fore his death. He treated him during his last illness. Banta told the witness that he had preserted in the world. He his last illness. Banta told the witness that he had prospered in the world. He did not expect to live a great while, and had disposed of his property to his heirs, so that they would all be well off; that he had employed the best counsel in California to see that it was done right; that he had left his wife well provided for, and also the others; that he had made Pierce his trustee to manage the estate.

Mrs. Banta came to the witness in the night time and said she had left.
Mr. Banta, and was not going to live with him any more; that she had got $16,000 of his money, and wanted to know how she could get her furniture away from the house.

The rest of the depositions were from people in Ohio relative to Mr. Banta's soundness of mind, and their reading occupied the remainder of the afternoon, court adjourning until Monday.

AZUSA WATER.

Petition Withdrawn-Order of Court in the Case of Roberts.

The Azusa irrigators have had a petition before the Board of Supervisors, requesting to be allowed to proeed in the matter of irrigating under the Wright Act. Yesterday the petition was withdrawn by them without prejudice.

The San Gabriel Water Committee

The San Gabriel Water Committee are proceeding vigorously in the work of pushing the tunnel ahead, and hope to secure results that will prove eminently satisfactory.

All the Azusa irrigators want is to be let alone to improve their places and make the country prosper.

The case of the Azusa Irrigation Company vs. H. C. Roberts, et al., came up before Judge Shaw yesterday, in Department No. 5 of the Superior Court, on the demurrer filed in the case. The demurrer was overruled. It was ordered that during the pendency of the action, the defendants, and each of them, refrain from taking control of the ditches and water held by the plaintiffs in trust, as alleged in their complaint, excepts of ar as may be necessary for the defendants, Roberts and Purdy, to control or use their proportional part of the waters originally appropriated from the San Gabriel River, and conduct the same to their respective tracts of land, as they have heretofore been accustomed to do as individuals, and not as officers.

A HEARTLESS SLANDER

That is Likely to Get a Blackmailer Into Trouble.

Mrs. Padelford, the prima donna in the Wyatt Opera Company, who is a daughter of Gen. Ordway of the Loyal Legion, with beadquarters at Washington, D. C., was prostrated last night over a scandalous article in a weekly sheet, purporting to come from Williams, the forger, who is now in a cell in the County Jail. Mrs. Padelford was seen by a Times representative has evening, and her condition is such that it is doubtful whether she will be able to sing Monday night in the opening opers. So far as the statement is concerned, she does not believe that Williams ever said anything of the kind.

Mrs. Hayhurst was not as argumentative as her logical husband, but evidently a clear-headed woman, cool and able to express herself with ease and all there. See the law of the courtroom every day since the trial began, and had watched the proceedings as closely as the lawyers in the case.

"In December, 1857," she said, "Mrs. Pierce asked me to see Mr. Banta, then in the Crown Villa where we were living, and endeavor to get him to go see the committee of the Crown Villa where we were living, and endeavor to get him to go sidered Mr. Banta perfectly rational. He was around the house and grounds of the Crown Villa, and I never saw him under any restraint. I passed his room about six times a day, and his door generally stood ajar. Banta appeared to have the management of at fairs at the Los Angeles House when we lived there. Mr. and Mrs. Banta treated each other with respect. He was somewhat slovenly in his habit and dress. There was great rejoicing in the family when he said he was going East. I remember the Sunday he went to church—the Sunda scalp wound, and altogether he looked as though he had had a pretty rough tussle. He was given a seat, to await the arrival of Duval, who was brought in in a few minutes by Officer Gilbert. Duval was also accompanied by his wife, and was very noisy and abusive. He was considerably under the influence of inquor, and abusive the influence of inquor, and abusive the officers in charge, using the video tanguage, finally becoming the content of the property of the land to be through the season of the content of the land to be through the land the la

On cross-examination he said that he now owes the Banta estate, and Mr. Pierce holds the note. He did not know Mr. Banta very well in Ohio; just knew him by sight. He slept with Mr. Banta in the same room at the Crown Villa. In his conversation he talked mostly about Ohio, and said he had already made Mr. Pierce his trustee. He went to Mr. Banta's room, because the old man wished him to, and said he liked to talk with him about Ohio.

but she was allowed to go on her own recognizance.

The fight, in which all the parties were mixed up, grew out of the filling up of a well on Duval's premises, which caused bad blood between the women. When Wilson went home from his work last eveaing he found them quarreling, and tried to put a stop to it, when Duval interfered. Wilson then turned on Duval, and had him down punching him, when Mrs. Duval pulled him off, and as soon as he was free he picked up a cobblestone he was free he picked up a cobblestone and struck Wilson on the head. Mrs. Duval also claims that Mrs. Wilson pulled several handfuls of hair out of her head in the fight.

Both Duval and his wife are said to be suffice of the morphine head in and

BENOIR RENAULT.

The Ravishing Case Falls to the Ground. The Renoir Renault rape case made a lamentable fiasco yesterday in Department No. 6 of the Superior Court. Renault is the man who was accused by an old woman named Mary A. Simmonds of having outraged her, at his house in the southwestern part of the city. As a result of the charge an attempt was made to arrest him. He put the constables to flight, and He put the constables to flight, and when Sheriff Aguirre went to their assistance with deputies, he opened up a murderous fire, and came near killing the Sheriff, wounding him severely in the left arm and in the side. Brousseau's coal bin, where he hid like a hunted animal, is remembered. When the old woman was put on the stand yesterday, she told the story over, which has heretofore been published. She said that she went to Renault's house to get assistance in capturing a fractious calf; that Renault told her the boy was in the house; that she went in, he followed, and, throwing her on the foor, accomplished his purpose. The old woman's appearance excited some sympathy as she told the story of the outrage. But that féeling met with a sudden check upon cross-examination.

In response to searching questions by counsel, she admitted that she is at present in a delicate condition, and has been for six months. She also admitted that she had been ravished twice before, and that her condition is due to one of these affairs.

As soon as this admission was made, counsel for the defendant moved that the Court instruct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. The Court made the usual charge in such cases, that the jury may return such a verdict. This they did without leaving their seats, and Benoir Renault walked out of court a free man, his black eyes flashing. He is yet to be tried for shooting Sheriff Aguirre.

Government property and freeing to that the collect the pay that price, as the land could be obtained by condemnation should the price be considered exorbitant. Including the amount for the land, an approximate estimate of cost of the addition and extension indicated would be $250,000, making with the $150,000 already appropriated $400,000 for building and site. This estimate is of course unofficial, and simply to give you an idea of the cost involved in the proposed change, at dany official estimates required would be made by the supervising architect. Admitting that the building is entirely inadequate for the purposes for which it was originally intended, the serious question is how to remedy the difficulty. We find that under the law appropriating $150,000 for a building and site, the late Secretary of the Treasury excreised his authority in the purchase of a site at the corner of Main and Winston streets, for which the Government paid $28,000 and certain citizens an equal amount. Then under due advertisement a contract was awarded to Messrs, Collins & Hargitt of this city, the lowest bidders, for erection and completion of the building for $101,000. Under this contract work has been in progress for nearly three mooths. The basement and area walls are completed and the first floor beams and girders are in place, the value of which work approxision, one of the contract work has been in progress for nearly three months. The basement and area walls are completed and the first floor beams and girders are in place, the value of which work approximates $25,000. Sub-contracts have been made by the pontractors for the stone work, from work, joiner work, marble work, etc., and work has progressed under them to the extent of about $40,000 more, as indicated by the contractors in a communication of this date (in response to my inquiry), copy herewith, making a total of $65,000 already invested in the work, in addition to the $28,000 paid for site, and the contract provides for the completion of the work within nine months from February 9th under a penalty of $50 per diem for every day's delay beyond that time, the Government to allow one day additional for each day's delay one day additional for each day's delay one and the communication of the contractors, they have incurred large indebtedness for material for the various branches of the work which the Government cannot pay for until it is placed in position in the building, and which, of course, the contractors could not be expected to pay for without prospect of resimbursment by the Government; consequently they could not be expected to assent to a suspension of the work at this time, and any action by the department looking to a suspension without their consent would appear arbitrary and unjust, and would throw them into the courts with claims for damages, which might perhaps take years to adjudicate. They might, however, under certain conditions as stipulated, agree to a suspension at the roof-line until it could be ascertained whether Congress would make the necessary additional appropriation for extension and responsible for any damage which might cocur in the interim. This suspension, however, would probably delay the work for nine months or more, and without any assurance of ultimate success in securing the appropriation, which, hewever, uncocur in the interim. This suspension, however, would probably delay the work for nine months or more, and without any assurance of ultimate success in securing the appropriation, which, however, unquestionably ought to be made. If there was a reasonable expectation of securing this increase of appropriation, based upon a recommendation of the Treasury Department. I should say by all means have the work suspended at the roof-line, and thus avoid the unnacessary expense of putting on and taking off the roof. Should the Secretary of the Treasury, upon the facts submitted to him with your recommendation, assent to make the necessary recommendation to Congress for the extension and eniargement, the contracros ought to have the earliest possible advice of intention to suspend at the point indicated, that they might avoid the expense of procuring material which would not be required for another year. If, however, the department should decline to make the recommendation desired, it is a grave question whether the Grand Jun the Grand Jun the Grand Jun the Charge of Such officials as it will accommodate, and when Congress shall meet make an affort to secure the necessary appropriation for additional land and extension, when the work could be done, should the appropriation be made, without interfering with the ecapant of the finished portion. This would save the complications incident to suspension, and while the building would be inadequate and unsatisfactory by reason of its inadequate and unsatisfactory by reas largement at any time when the appropriation should be secured. This, however, is a question which the department will be in position to determine when you shall have placed the fact before them, with your recommendation. You will observe that the contractors state that they will substitute the original second story of building, as designed when three stories were contemplated, for the second story as contracted for, for not exceeding $3500, and it make no recommendation regarding that, as the department can best determine whether it is wise to make this substitution. Very respectfully,

CONGRESSMAN VANDEVER'S LETTER.
VENTURA (Cal.), June 20, 1859.
Honorable Secretary of the Treasury,
Washington, D.C.—Sir: I inclose papers from the Board of Trade of Los Angeles and a statement of the Superintendent of Construction, relating to the public building now in course of erection at said city.
A statement and resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles, on the same subject, has already been transmitted to you.

In closing I desire to observe that in my indement the information and reports herewith furnished conclusively show that the dimensions of the public building now under contract for construction at Los Angeles is far short of the requirements of the public service at the present time, and that the steady growth and development that has characterized this part of the country and of the city of Los Angeles within the past few years is a fair index of what may be realized in the near future, such a building as that now being erected will then be viewed as a monument of folly on account of its ridiculously inadequate dimensions, and as a standing imputation on the liberality of a great government.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant, Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Wiseman, Mary Haskins, Samuel M. Haskins, Flora noon in the presenc of 1500 or 2000 people. Considerable interest was felt in the game from the fact that in the last contest between these nines, the police carried off the prize, a handsome banner. The constables have been a little sore over this ever since, and have been anxiously awaiting a chance to demonstrate their superiority as athletecs, saying that when they came together they whould show them how to play ball, which they did in good shape.

The Fifteenth Annual Commence ment to Be Held in the Los Angeles Theater Next Tuesday Afternoon-Programme and List of Graduates.

The middle class of Los Angeles High School held interesting exercises in the Normal School building yesterday afternoon in honor of the class of 1889. At 2 o'clock, the hour fixed, assembly hall was crowded with spectators and students.

The exercises opened with an over-ture, admirably executed, by the High School orchestra. The orchestra is composed of young ladies and gentlemen, and they display unusual and marked ability in their work.

The question, "Resolved, That the President Should Be Elected by Popuar Vote," was debated by Ivan Moore in the affirmative and Stanley Hough-ton in the negative. Their treatment of the subject was characterized by greater originality and riper thought than is usually observed on such occa-than is usually observed on such occasions.

Misses Avery, Pinkham, Mansfield, Chambers, Johnson and Gifford gave a song, "Bright Spring Has Come," very effectively.

"The Legend of a Mermaid" was a bright production by Miss Gertrude Harrison, who delivered it in a delightful manner.

Misses Booth and Pinkham rendered a plano duo in fine style, and were warmly applauded.

One of the most interesting features of the entertainment was W. D. Howell's amusing farce, The Elevator, which was given by Misses Pinkham, and Mansfield, Avery, Borchers, Holland, Henderson, and Messrs Green, Avery, Stephenson, Tuthill, Miller and Martin.

Then followed the presentation of a handsome badge to the class, in behalf of the Star and Crescent Literary Society, by Ivan Moore, assisted by Daisy Austin and Cora Foy. There was a neat response for the seniors by Sam McKinlay, and, after the "Farewell" song, the audience dispersed, feeling that they had witnessed one of the pleasantest school entertainments of the year.

Yesterday afternoon there was some of the best playing that has ever been witnessed in this city at the Tufts court, on Grand avenue. For some time the lovers or tennis nave wanted to see Miss Grace Semans and Miss Tufts play, but until yesterday it could not be arranged. The games were very close and exciting. Miss Tufts won the set with a score of 6 to 4. Later Miss Tufts and Mr. Archibald defeated Miss Semans and Mr. Cosby with a score of 6 to 4.

high school building was received and placed on file.

Mr. Gosper then moved that the board preceed to the consideration of the plans, and that those for the High School be taken up first, as they involved the largest expenditure of money. He suggested that each member write the names of four of the plans on slips of paper, as first, second, third and fourth choice, which should then be drawn from a hat, the first ballot to be informal. This was agreed to, and a ballot taken, which resulted as follows:

adopted.

Mr. Cox moved to amend by the board going into an examination of the plans again, and that Preston's plans be first considered.

The amendment was adopted, and the board again took up the plans, examining them closely, occupying about an hour. The plans were not altogether satisfactory, and various alterations were suggested. Finally it was moved and seconded that Mr. Preston's plans and seconded that Mr. Preston's plans be adopted, with such small modifications as the board might order. A vote was taken, as follows: Yeas, Frew, Gosper, Whaling and Powers. Nays, Ellis, Pomeroy and Cox. Mr. Woodbury declined to vote. Mr. Whaling was unwilling to give his vote until the nature of the alterations were explained. The motion was finally withdrawn.

It was decided to take an informal ballot upon two plans only. The result was as follows: Preston, 6 for first place and 1 for second; Newsom, 2 for first place and 1 for second. The following were also indicated for second place: Brown, Curlett and Costerisan.

The following resolution was then offered by Gov. Gosper: "That the board recommend to the Council the adoption of Mr. Preston's plan for a High School, provided that Mr. Preston make such changes as the board recommend to the Council Mr. Preston as the architect for the building."

Mr. Whaling objected to the resolution, on the ground that the statement about alterations was indefinite

SOME THINGS THAT "BAG."

"His trousers bagged at the knee and the next day it snowed." This is the official statement made by that truthful and conservative journal, the Examiner, which never, no, never, deals in sensation, relative to that ex traordinary episode which happened in the Bohemian Club, San cisco, wherein John Isaacs, whilom of the San Bernardino Times, now a reporter for the Alta, responding to a de tail by his editorial chief, made his way into the sacred and more or less awful precincts of the aristocratic Bohemian Club, arrayed in the garb, not of a society dude, but of an average respectable citizen with work to do. Seeing which, Mr. Raphael Weill, who figured as a sort of high steward. or First Groom of the Royal Bedchamber to the Bohemian Club, pro eeded to look with scorn upon the audacious newsgatherer, and refused hima seat at the festive board; in fact not only refused him a seat amon the guests, but intimated very broadly that Mr. Isaacs might look for a seat "on the sofa in the hall." Where upon the Alta representative, as man of spirit, at once shook the dust of the Bohemian Club from his freshlypolished brogans, returned to the office and reported that it was "no go." Then it was that the temperature ros and the snow began to fall in the vicinity.

The unpardonable offense of Mu Isaacs, it appears, was that his trous ers bagged at the knees, which fact se offended the esthetic souls of Mr. Weill and Mr. Robertson, the pres dent, that they joined in administer ing the "grand bounce" to the offend ing brother from the cow counties temporarily representing the journa of Mr. John P. Irish.

This disturbing question of "good form" has for several days been convulsing social and newspaper circles in San Francisco and all long shore, occupying columns upon columns of type-set at 50 cents, more or less, per thousand ems-in numberless abl and estimable journalistic colleagues and we fear that THE TIMES has been lacking in its customary enterprise in not before wrestling with it. But we now proceed to make up for lost time by producing, at enormous expense, a true and graphic pictorial representation of Mr. Isaacs' "pants' when off duty. This picture is unique; in fact, it is a genuine Murillo, and we take a becoming pride in this artistic achievement of the great noral daily. Having thus, as we believe, per formed our whole duty in the prem ises, albeit a trifle late, we will sub mit the question to the court of Public Opinion, with a single further remark one which we had the honor to make in these columns on a former occasion when some sneering allusion was mad by an off-color journalistic interlope to the "baggy" appearance of cer-tain contemporary editorial trousers. The remark we then felt constrained to make any which are the constrained was that "baggy" trousers, however lacking in esthetic qualities, cannot be put down as an outrage upon the moral law, nor their possessor as a mors outcast, but that a baggy character one that sags down at the knees, and all over, by the weight of its own rotenness and infamy—is something much more serious for honest men and women to contemplate. Commending this view to the serious consideration of the members of the Bohemian Club, we go to press with our latest edition of the prize chromo enormous quantity.

THE GRADES NEEDED.

What the people of the northwesterly portion of the city need, above all things, is a system of practicable grades for their streets, such grades as they can conveniently drive over with carriages and loaded teams. They do not ask that the streets shall be graded to a perfect level, but that they shall be free from steep and difficult hills. and convenient for ordinary driving. They want safe, not dangerous grades and such grades they have a right to In too many instances, in demand. that part of the city, expensive grading has been done to very little pur pose beyond money making on the part of contractors. It seems as if private property-owners and street contractors had absolutely ruled the roost in the matter of grades in portions oi this city, there being no signs of engineering in some cases. The public convenience seems not to have been, in the slightest degree, an ele ment in the calculation regarding the work. Take, for example, Second street over the first hills going west, a very costly piece of work, but of no benefit whatever to the people at large. It is impracticable as a drive and frightfully steep, even for a cable roadway, and yet the amount of work-done upon it was sufficient to have made it a tol erable thoroughfare. It is no excuse that the job was done by and at the expense, mainly, of a street-railway company; the city, the corporate au thorities are responsible for the gradients. Strange enough, the grade is to run over the tip-top of the hill and quite under the bottom of the The grading is all on steep side hills. The idea of reducing the height of the hill and filling in the ravine seems never to have entered the head of the projector of that grade.

And so Temple street, over the same hill, further to the north, exhibits the same sort of engineering, but in de-gree less objectionable; but then the Temple-street grade is acknowledged to have been controlled entirely in the interest of private property. It is boldly claimed that the public had no right to a voice in the matter, because joining property-owners. THE flamboyant reply of Gov. Thayer of Nebraska to the requests of the British-American Association that he should assist in securing the recall of Minister Egan from Chili, while it contains some good points, is too evidently a bid for the Irish-American vote. The Governor even goes out of his way to severely criticize the action of the Chicago Grand Jury in the Cronin case. Mr. Thayer apparently questions the right of a British-American society to exist in this country. It has just as much right as an Irish-American society—no more, no less. We could get along very well without either. Further than this, we would remark, that there would not be so many semi-foreign associations in this country if American politicians were not always so ready to truckle to the foreign vote.

Vandever, in his letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, recommends that a still larger sum than this should be appropriated, so as to give us a building adapted to our present and future needs.

The suggestions made by Mr. Jacobs will, in all probability, be followed, with perhaps some modifications, or possibly, if we are fortunate, some increase in the amount of the appropriation mentioned by him. The more this matter is investigated, the more evident appears the fact which we have frequently insisted upon—that the entire agitation for a removal of the site emanates from a small ring of real-

As I was slowly sauntering along Fort street yesterday morning I was musing on the change which has taken place in this city during the past few years. Seven years ago when I came to Los Angeles she was without paved sidewalks. It was wearisome trudging along where the sharp stones stuck up and the dust in summer lay as thick as upon the streets. She had no park that was worthy of the name. She had but two short lines of street cars. With the exception of the Temple and Baker blocks she had scarcely any handsome business blocks to do her credit. Long rows of low woodens shanties disfigured Spring. Fort, Main and other business streets. She had but few or three churches. Her streets were sloughs of mud and filth in winter, and were dust-laden in summer. On the hills to the westward, where thousands of her people now have beautiful homes, not a dozen houses stood. Not a single cable line was built, and only a few gas-lights made drawn where thousands of her people now have beautiful homes, not a dozen houses stood. Not a single cable line was built, and only a few gas-lights made the new First Congregational church is now being bulit was in the country, and an orange orchard stretched its green boughs over the solitary places. Around St. Vincent's was a high board fence, and that now fine building was then a quaint old structure with its sharp brick gables looking as antiquated as many an old world house. Fort street had not a business rounds of the press, credited to the World, and yet that paper had not, at the opinion that somewhere in the heart of the Dark Continent there plexioned people. house upon it save a single drug store. Olive street from Second to Temple was not open. There was not a single directlass hotel in the city. We had but two railroad depois and they were rude, uncomfortable places for the traveler to wait. There was an old, tumble-down adobe that was by courtesy called a jail, and Los Angeles was, in everything, but a big, overgrown village, with two representative civilizations within its limits. Walking up and down our streets, the Saunterer finds now but a faint reminder of even that recent past. Adobes and shanties; dusty sidewalks; churchless squares; ill-kept plazas; diu-shining gas lamps; absence of street-cars; homeless hills, and the thousand other things that were noticeable in that near past have all vanished, and was are a city, with paved streets, electric lights, cable roads, magnificent homes, beautiful parks, elegant churches and business houses and all that goes to make up an attractive metropolis. The Saunterer feels a species of individual pride in the marvelous growth of Los Angeles while walking along enjoying the manifold attractions which she now has to present. And we have here a city in which all may well take pride.

AN INDIAN'S COMPLAINT.

To Ugly Charges Against the Agent of the Nez Perces.

WASHINGTON, June 22—[By the Associated Press.] James Reubens, a Nez Percei Indian from Idaho, called on Secretary Noble and Acting Indian Commissioner Belt today and warmly protested in the name of his tribe against the retention in office of Charles E. Monteith was agent for the Nez Perces during the four years immediately prior to 1896, when he was succeeded by George W. Morria. His present appointment was made since the incoming of the present administration. Reubens represented that during Monteith's former term he had forfeited the respect and good will on many occasions he had demonstrated the fact that he had no interest whatever in the welfare of the Indians. Reubens said Monteith was a man totally unfitted by nature to occupy the position he held, as was demonstrated by the fact that during his former term he had gained the ill-will and enunity of nearly every member of the tribe. He said further that his people would persistently oppose the allottment of their lands in severalty now being made by Miss Fletcher, unless Montieth was recalled and another and better man sent to them in his place.

Secretary Noble, at the consission of Reuben's statement, assured him that his charges against Monteith would receive his careful attention, and if it was found that Monteith was unfitted far the position to which he was appointed, he would not be permitted to continue in it. The Secretary, however, said that while he was disposed to give them as their agent the very best man obtainable, yet he fully expected the Indians to immediately abandon any purpose they might have of retalitating against Monteith's appointment, by refusing to take their lands in severalty.

POMONA, June 22.—[By the Associated Press.] For three months M. Henri Delisie has been making a study of the grapevine disease in vineyards in Southern California. He is one of the best viticulturist experts of Southern France, and came to this region after repeated requests from the wine-growers.

M. Delisie says that the strange vine disease is akin to the mal nero, which killed over 30,000 acres of vineyard land in France in 1856, and has since reappeared there. The disease is of fungus growth. M. Delisie finds that the only cure for it is to spray the vines with a preparation of blue stone, lime vines with a preparation of time scape, time and water.

People in this valiey who have used the same preparation have almost succeeded in stamping out the vine disease, and are growing very large crops of grapes.

Its Advantages Compared with

San Francisco, June 22.—(By the Associated Press.) W. H. Mills, vice-president of the California State Board of Trade, has returned from a tour of investigation through Oregon and Washington Territory, and makes some comparison of the ad-vantages of that section with those of California. The immigration into Oregon and Washington is, he says, much greater than that into California, and those sections are Washington is, he says, much greater than that into California, and those sections are filling up rapidly. This can largely be accounted for, in his opinion, because of the fact that the verdure, the flora and wheat fields of Oregon make it look more like home to the eastern man than does California, but in a majority of cases where land has to be cleared of timber and otherwise put into condition for the farmer, the cost of getting Oregon land into as good condition as the irrigated lands of the San Joaquin Valley is $150 per acre.

The average cost of getting water to arid lands in California, as shown by reclamation statistics, is but $10 per acre. In other words, laying aside the original cost of the land, the Oregonian has to spend 15 times as much tor putting his fertile land into condition as the California. Oregon's sheep and cattle will always be better than those of California, because they have a greater variety of good grasses, and Oregon woil is unsurpassed. Oregon can raise finer apples than California, because of climatic reason, but cannot approach this State in the quality of other fruits, though its peaches are good when the crop is not uncertain. Better oats are produced there than in California, but Oregon, abounding in cattle and with the richest grasses, is importing 75 per cent. of its butter from California.

A NEW WITNESS.

George E. Brooks, a railroad news agent, tells a queer story. He says that on the night of the Cronin murder he was driving in Lake View with his sweetheart, and saw three men loading a trunk into a wagon at the Carlson cottage. A half hour later he saw the men dumping the contents of the trunk into the catch-basin in which the body of Cronin was found. He says he saw the men, and he and his female companion would be able to identify them.

Brooke's explanation of his failure to fell the story before is that he was afraid of losing his life, as he believed that the men concerned in the murder were so desperate that they would kill any one they thought would tern up as a witness against them. Before telling the story he stipulated that he should be given protection. He describes the three men that he saw, and the description of one of them is said to fit. Burke, the Winnipeg prisoner.

Written for The Times. Who Knows? Who knows:

If we were only young and fair,
And life held not a thread of care,
While flowers bloomed and birds sang loud
And only laughter heard the crewd:
Ah! would we care what comes and goes
As on and on the river flows?

Who knews?

f nothing made the wrong from right-to shadow moving left the light, to pleasure stolen from today, darred peace upon the morrow's way; the would we prize the glad refrain if we heard not the sadder etrain? Who knows?

If every hand that touched Life's keys Might quick responsive give back glees, While hearts beat on with even throb— From no bird's splendor could we rob, Ah! would we not some light th t played Across fair skies beld different shade? Who knows?

If no smiles chased our tears away,
No wayward will turned steps astray;
No thorns were on the stems of flowers,
But careless joy wreathed all the hours
Would we not sigh for thorn and tear
That richer purpose stand out clear?
Who knows?

Remarkable Engineering Feat

Remarkable Engineering Feat in China.

[Colliery Engineer.]

One of the most remarkable engineering feats appears to have been achieved in China, in the face of extraordinary physicial difficulties, namely, the successful stretching of a steel-wire cable of seven strands across the river Lunann, this feat having been accomplished by the Danish engineer Delinde, assisted only by unskilled native labor. The cable extends between two points at a distance of nearly 4700 feet apart, the height of the first support being about 450 feet above the present level of the river, and the second about 740 feet. The cable in question is said to be the longest in the world, with a single exception, namely, the cable across the Kistna, measuring some 5070 feet. There are also two cables across the Ganges of 2900 and 2830 feet respectively.

PINCKNEY GETS THERE WITH BOTH FEET.

School Election-At the Churches-Here and There-The Fountain-Personal Mention

PASADENA, June 22 .- [Correspondence of THE TIMES.] The School Trustees stole a march on the public this afternoon and elected Herbert Pinckney Superintendent of Schools. The vote was not unanimous. Prof. C. E. Tebbets was elected principal, at a salary of about $1200. The Superintendent's salary was placed at $2000. The result meets with general satisfaction and is what the Times correspondent predicted before the election for a trustee took place, only a few weeks ago. The public is too well acquainted with the details of the exciting contest and the bitter personalities indulged in. Messrs. McLachlan and Rossister, with their constituents, can now rest more easily and listen to the music as the band goes by. Prof. Pinckney has been identified with the public schools of this city for several years and is well qualified to fill the responsible position. Prof. Pierce, who recently resigned to accept the principalship of the Chico Normal School, has brought these schools up to the present high standard.

FRESH LITERATURE

PORTRY AND SONG-By JAMES GOWD! This charming volume of poems will be appreciated by every lover of true poesy. Their author is the well-known original ballad singer whose songs and original ballad singer whose songs and whose verse have delighted thousands, and whose name has become a household word throughout the land. Listen to some of the strains that seem to touch the stars with their melody. Here is one from the poem, "The Woman and the Angel:"
"She ston the side of the mountain.

"She sat on the side of the mountain,
The cataract thundered below,
Above her the roofs of the ages
Were lifting their thatches of snow;
The landscape was swimming in glory,
The sky and the earth were in love,
And the great peaks seemed hanging like

Cast out from the planets above, And there is force and soul in this, from "Fremont's Battle Hymn:" "Go strangle the throat of Niagara's wrath, Till he utters no sound on his torrent-co path; Go bind his great sinews of rock-wearing Till he begs at your feet, like your own fet-tered slaves;

Go cover his pulses with sods from the ground.
Till he hides from your sight, like the hare from the hound;
Then swarm to our borders and silence the notes

notes
That thunder of freedom from millions of throats." In "The Children of the Battlefield" there is the beauty of simplicity, tenderness and pathos. The brave soldier with the picture of his three little ones, how touchingly is he here portrayed.

"Upon the field of Gettysburg,
When morning shone again,
The crimson cloud of battle burst
In streams of flery rain;

And none more nobly won the name
Of Champion of the Free
Than he who pressed the little frame
That held uis children three;
And none were braver in the strife
Than he who breathed the prayer—
'O. Father! Shield the soldier's wife,
And for his children care."

This little volume is a society novel written in the well-known and attractive style of its author. It has its lessons. First, that showing the danlessons. First, that showing the danger of egotistical absorption, with its inevitable tendency toward overwhelming selfishness, and a disregard for any principle that interferse with it; and secondly that which portrays the dangers and temptations that beset innocent, trusting girls in fashionable life, when left to themselves without wise

Day Saints. Chicago, New York and San Francisco: Belford, Clark & Co. By ALVA MILTON KEER.

Pictures of real life among the Latter Day Saints are not pleasant ones to contemplate. This work was written while the author was living in Utah, and from the scenes witnessed there he has taken many and woven them into a stirring romance. Of Mormonism he says: "Mormonism is not a religion; those fine spiritual laws that mankind after centuries of sifting have found pure gold at the bostom of experience are lacking. A shuffling and repulsive assumption of worship is put forward by the priesthood on all public accisions, no matter how secular and unholy. Worship is vulgarized, and life is largely brutalized. . The outlying brinks of this grave Theocracy are cloaked with religion, and by its binding, persuading agency sustenance and power are forced back through the arteries to the false and lecherous heart. Its history can never be told; much of it is not for decent ears; God alone shall wholly treasure it up against the future in His all-preserving silence."

The enforcement of the order produced more kicking than any scheme that we ever tried to carry out. Men who had been known as Colonels for years, although they had never set. Men who had been known as Colonels for years, although they had never set a squadron in the field, protested against plain "Mr." as an outrage and a wrong. We stood it as long as we could, but finally yielded to the pressure, and reversed the engine, so to speak. Instead of calling no man not in the military service a Colonel, we directed that every leading Democrat in the State should be called a Colonel. As every Democrat considers himself a leading Democrat, they are all Colonels now.

Offered in Tracts of 2½, 5, 10, 20, 40 and 160 Acres TO SUIT PURCHASERS.

Over 4300 acres have been sold since February, 1, 1888. The soil is a deep, rich, sandy loam, very easy to cultivate.

An inexhaustible supply of water. Apples, Peaches, Pears, Prunes, Figs, Plums, Cherries, Persis Raisins and Table Grapes, Loquats, Quinces, Apricots, Olives, English Walnuts, Chestnuts and Peanuts, as well as Grain and Vegetables of all kinds, grow to the highest degree of perfection WITHOUT IRRIGATION.

Mr. Milton Thomas and Mr. B. M. Town of this city, and Mr. Byron O. Clark of Pasadena, Cal., the well-known and experienced nurserymen, have purchased large tracts of these lands and planted them to orchards. They regard them as the very best lands in Los Angeles county for the cultivation of decidnous fruits, Olives and English Walnuts, and owing to their near proximity to Los Angeles City, the cheapest lands in South ern California at the price they are now offered,

Purchasers can make arrangements at the office of this company to have their lands planted in fruits and vines of their own selection, and cared for 1, 2 and 8 years at the actual cost. Apply to

A Literary Codfish-An Early Macaulay-James Mill, the Indian Historian-Leibnitz-Louis le Debonnaire.

On June 23, 1626, a codfish was brought to Cambridge market, which, upon being opened, was found to contain a book in its maw or stomach. The book was much soiled and covered with slime, though it had been wrapped decimo work written by John Frith, comprising several treatises on religious subjects. In a letter now in the British Museum, written by Mr. Mead of Christ Church College, the writer says: I saw all with mine own eyes, fish, maw, piece of sailcioth, and the book, and observed all I have written, only I saw not the opening of the fish, which not many did, being upon the fish-woman's stall in the market, who first cut off his head, to which the maw hanging and seeming much stuffed with something, it was searched and found as aforesaid. He that had had his nose as near as I yester morning, would have been persuaded there was no imposture here without witness. The fish came from Lynn. The treatises contained in the book were written by Frith when in prison. Strange to say, he had been confined in a fish cellar at Oxford, from whence he was removed to the Tower, and in 1533, was burnt at the stake for his adherence to the reformed religion. The Cambridge authorities reprinted his book, which had been completely forgotten until it had turned up in this singular manner.

There was a Macaulay's History of England long before Lord Macaulay England long before Lord Macaulay was born, and in its day a famous history it was. The first volume appeared in 1763, and the fifth in 1771, and the five quartos sold rapidly and were replaced by two or three editions in octavo.—It was entitled "A History of England from the Accession of James I to the Accession of the House of Hanover," and the author was Mrs. Catharine Macaulay. She was the daughter of John Sawbridge, and born in Kent in 1733. From her youth was she an ardent student and an enthusiastic daughter of John Sawbridge, and born in Kent in 1733. From her youth was she an ardent student and an enthusiastic republican. Dr. Wilson, son of the Bishop of Sodor of Man, made her a present of a house and a library in Bath worth £1500, and to the scandal of sober-people, placed her statue in front of St. Stephen's Church in London, of which he was rector. On the death of her husband, Dr. Macaulay, 1778, she married a young Scotchman named Graham. The disparity of their years excited general ridicule, and Dr. Wilson removed her statue from St. Stephen's. She and her husband visited America in 1785, spending three weeks at Mt. Vernon on a visit to Washington. On her return she retired to a country house in Leicestershire, where she died June 23, 1791, aged 58. Her history contains no original thought, but simply a rehash of the facts contained in the books to be found in any library.

JAMES MILL, THE INDIAN HISTORIAN.
Until James Mill, father of John Stuart Mill, published his "History of British India," in 1818, there was no work in which an account of the conquests of Cive and Warren Hastings could be found. Anyone who wished to become acquainted with the subject had to seek for information in a chaos of books and documents. It was Mill's merit out of this chaos to evolve order.
Though nobody would open his book for amusement, and many would close it with weariness, it is still a work of

It with wearness, it is still a work of great merit. The author made no attempt at brilliancy, and was only careful to describe events accurately and clearly. James Mill was the son of a shoemaker and small farmer, and born at Moutrose, April 6, 1773. He was educated for the ministry, but his inclinations turned him to literature and philosophy. For some years he acted as tutor and editor, and finally settling in London, supported himself for 20 years by writing for magazines and newspapers. In 1806 his celebrated son, John Stuart Mill, was born, and about the same time he began his "History of India," which occupied him 12 years. The East India Company was so pleased with the work that Mill was made manager of its finances. But affluence did not diminish his activity. affluence did not diminish his activity He was the intimate friend of Jeremy Bentham, whose opinions he shared. LEIBNITZ, the illustrious philosopher and mathematician, who shares with Sir Isaac matician, who shares with Sir Isaac Newton the honor of inventing the calculus, a new branch of mathematics, was born in Leipsic, June 23, 1646. At the age of 21 he was made a councillor of state, and visited France and England, and formed the acquaintance of Newton and others, and was elected a Fellow in the Royal Society of London. In recognition of his scientific services, Leibnitz was appointed, in 1702, president of the Royal Society of Berlin, and the Emperor, Charles VI., made him a member of the Aulic Council. Leibnitz was the author of numerous learned, profound and valuable works.

Special Sales That Benefit the Masses -A Long Array of Choice Goods at Marvelous Prices-A Forthboming Banner Sale.

LOS ANGELES, June 23, 1889.

OUR GIGANTIC 20C SALE TOMORROW

The meritorious special sales that we have inaugurated have become the household work The meritorious special sales that we have inaugurated have become the household word of the citizens of Los Angeles. When we announce a sale the people turn out in force; in fact, a regular ovation is tendered us. The reason why is because we inever trifle with the public, we never deceive the public. The public have confidence in us, and we in their good judgment and appreciation. A merchant who imagines he can palm off indifferent values under the guise of bargains, and then chuckles to himself about the high profits made, does not fool the public, but himself. He destroys confidence in the minds of his patrons, and in time will find it to work have with his trade. We have the public confidence. We have worked for years to obtain and retain by honest, upright actions the good-will, the appreciation and the confidence of the public. We have never abused it, and today when we announce a sale customers flock to us from far and near, knowing full well that what we say is true, and our actions are upright.

well that what we say is true, and our actions are upright.

The 20c sale tomorrow was inaugurated by us to show the public what we can do. We have put forth our greatesteffort to make this sale the banner one of the year, and in this we shall and must succeed. Our values are unapproachable; our assortment vast, and our willingness to serve the public boundless. All are invited. We'll try to make things lively tomorrow. Come, but be sure and read each line so that you will be acquainted with all the bargains.

IN THE HEART OF AMERICA'S DARK CONTINENT.

Roughing It on the Road to Juti galpa-In a Furious Storm-Spider Monkeys-Camping Under Difficulties - Brilliant Flora Headed for a Terra Incog.

JUTIGALPA (Honduras), May 21 .-[Special Correspondence of THE TIMES.] Our journey from Comayagua to this city was one of a varied and adventurous character. Our first real experience was one commanding no little diplomacy and some consider able courage, through the disgraceful conduct of our moza, or muleteer. Any one who has traveled in this country and engaged the services of a moza, whose slowness and unfaithfulness are proverbial, can keenly appreciate our tribulation when, at 12 o'clock noon, on a bright day, we reached a little village at the foot of the Cordilleras, and this officious individual informed us that here he intended to stop for the night. We had only traveled 12 miles that day, and were in a hurry to get over the mountains before night. But because a little speck of cloud had appeared upon the horizon he declared he would not risk the calentura by getting wet. The proposition was so audacious that we naturally flew into a passion, when he persisted in his determination, and we swore out a series of anathemas in various languages. But he only answered with an aggravating grin, which he were blandly, while he deliberately took down our packs and unsaddled the mules. We were determined not to submit to such an outrage, and as we had made firm friends with two of the baretooted dignitaries of the allege.

to employ snother more, saddle our mules and start. This brought the rascal out with threats against any one whould touch his mules, but instantly four revolvers were leveled at his head, and he was caimly but firmly convinced that the slightest interference on his part would end his existence. It was an instantaneous cure, as he at once changed front, and announced himself ready to proceed on the journey. Flushed with our victory, we left with flying colors, and even the plaudits of some of the villagers who had witnessed the whole proceeding. Our joy, however, was proceeding. Our joy, however, was of short duration, as within two hours, and as if to verify to warning of the scoundrel, the rain overtook us while half way up the mountain. The rainy season having just set in throughout this immediate section, we were preseason having just set in throughout this immediate section, we were prepared for the emergency, or at least thought we were, until the aggravating discovery that the trifling moza had left our capotes (rain coats) behind, through his infernal carelessness. This not only exposed us to the fury of a drenching cloud-burst, but subjected our hammocks and blankets subjected our hammocks and blankets to the same immersion. There was another chorus of anathemas heaped upon the muleteer's head, but it had no more effect than his monotonous "vamos, vamos," hurled at his heedless and obstinate mules. We hastened the mountain leaving him behind up the mountain, leaving him behind with the cargo, to come at his lazy leisure. We succeeded in soon passing through the rain-cloud, reaching dry ground and bright sunshine upon the crest of the mountain.

A GORGEOUS PANORAMA. Here we were treated to a sight which atoned, to some extent, for our dilemma and hardships and made us forget our many tribulations. Below us and all around the mountain side hung a dark mass of clouds, rolling and squirming like the boiling waters of some giant cauldron. The muttering thunder and roaring winds, seconded by vivid flashes of lightning, gave to the view a scene of such awful grandeur that it could not be faithfully portrayed by tongue or pencil. The giant palms and ceibas, swaying before the wind, looked, through the misty squall and rolling clouds, like the troubled ocean heaving in a tempest. At each brief lull we could hear the ominous dashing of mountain streams, swellen by the copious raindilemma and hardships and made us shyness had enabled them to always keep out of our reach. But just before reaching the Guayape Valley we observed quite a large troop of these mimics sporting by the roadside. A quick run of our party forced them to climb the trees, and, contrary to our mutual agreement, one of the party fired his rifle and wounded one, which commended a meet nifeway wall. mutual agreement, one of the party fired his rifle and wounded one, which commenced a most piteous wail. It had been shot through the abdomen, and another bullet would have ended its sufferings, but just then its mate ran down from another part of the tree and sustained his drooping strength by holding him in her arms. She then examined his wound, and seeing that it was bleeding profusely, pulled off, with one hand, a number of green leaves and carefully inserted them into the hole made by the bullet, to staunch its flow of blood. A surgeon could not have been more careful and deliberate with a patient than was this wild denizen of the forest with its mate. During this proceeding it uttered a low, muttering sound as though trying to assuage its sufferings with a consideration and pity that looked so human. In a few moments the wounded monkey died, and his widow morkey tried to cat a way the one limb to another, fell to the ground, where the moza easily effected her capture. The almost human instinct displayed by this little creature made us ashamed of our cruelty in shooting her mate. The female was taken with us to Jutigalpa, where she refused all food and water, and the morning after our arrival was found dead in her cage, it being reasonable to suppose, of grief for her dead mate.

BRILLIANT FLORA. The general scenery of this route has already been described, and while its beauty cannot be exaggerated, one cannot help but marvel at the wonderful and often times curious vegetable growth. Among these might be mentioned the prolific growth of rare orchids, which are encountered everywhere, either in the tiny clefts of growth. Among these might be mentioned the prolific growth of rare orchids, which are encountered everywhere, either in the tiny clefts of trees, or in gorgeous festoons interlacing the forest. The enthusiastic collector of varied species could find here a regular elysium to satisfy his desires. We also noticed the quaint and beautiful bithergia, with its spike of brilliant crimson flowers, growing erect from the naked horizontal lim of a tree. A most fertile growth of cana indica was observed throughout the Guayape Valley in a wild state. This was very surprising, as it was not thought that this particular plant was found in a natural state anywhere outside of India, where it became historic during the Sepoy rebellion, its intensely hard seed being used as a substitute for bullets by the natives when their lead balls had become exhausted. It is from this circumstance that the plant receives its name. The calladium esculantum, so highly prized for lawn decoration in the Southern States, is found here in abundance growing in a wild state. The curious sensitive plant, whose peculiarities I shall describe more minutely at another time, is found everywhere. The bread fruit, with its curious perforated leaves, pretty lichens, carpeting the rocks and festooning the forests, lovely ferns in the clefts of rocks or as parasites on palms, bowers of mosses hanging in graceful wreaths, and a multitude of other smaller flowers of varied form were met with at every turn, and added to the charms of the gorgeous scenery which greets the traveler in Olancho.

At last we reached Jutigalpa,

It is a city of perhaps 7000 peo-ple, gracefully situated in the midst of the Guayape Valley, the vast spreading plains of which are almost lost in the horizon. When the storm had subsided night was upon us, and no sign of human habitation in view. We had to descend cautiously through the darkness, as many precipitous passes and yawning gorges imperiled our road at various points. We finally reached alittle lonely hacienda located upon one of the terraced plains of the mountain side, and here we stoped for the night. From this point our party leaves tomorrow for the wild section of the Upper Wanks, south of Lake Que-Upper Wanks, south of Lake Quebracho. This course has become necessary, by reason of the wet season having set in so early, and the impossibility of coming down from its delta before the floods begin. wante taeguna of Fort hompsos were frowning down.
The men in gray,
The were in gray,
Threw crumbs to titmice that came that way
One bright spring morn—new mated bliss
In the haunts of death. Strange front this:
Seeking a place for a young love's nest,
They chose a canon as suited best;
They chose a canon as suited best;
Then with a filp,
Filp, flippety hip,
Filp, flippety hip,
Hoppety, hippety, tripety, trip.
In the mouth of the implement made to kill,
They built their brooding nest with skill
Before the battle of Newbern.

The men in blue.

Came marching through.

And balls, and shells hissed, whistled and flew.

And the men in gray fired the chicadee's gun.

Which scattered the blud's nests just begun,

Mid the are and smoke, when a solid shot.

Dismounted the sannon. The bluts, harmed not,

With flutter and skip,

And a trip, trip, trip,

A hippety, hoppety, flippety flip,

Had flown with the screech of the first wild shell
Far into the woods where 'twas safe to dwell
During the battle of Newbern.

And os thatday, so the soldiers say,
After the blue had succeeded the gray,
The birds once more
Came as before
Back to the haunts of those men of war;
After the 'mole and the camage and death,
Almost in the cannon's flery breath,
They gathered once more moss, feathers and hair,

And went to work their nest to repair,
With their hoppety hip,
And their busiest skip;
In the now dismointed cannon they'd trip,
Beneath the mild spring sun in the South,
Rebuilded their nest in the cannon's mouth
After the battle of Newbern.

These small chicadees they cared not a mite Which soldiers were wrong and which were right, which soldiers were wrong and which were right,

The blue or the gray,
Who came that day
To mangle and slay in their own rude way;
They only sought for the ways of peace.
And waited astic fer the noise to cease;
Then built in the gun they had used before,
And showed contempt for the ways of war,
with their hippety hip,
Filip, flip, flip, flip,
With their teetering it and hoppety skip:
And this is the legend the soldiers tell
About the titmice, and what befell
After the battle of Newbern.

Was this a presage of what would be,
This home rebuilding by the chicadee?
For they display
The blue and gray
In the feathery suits they wear every day,
Was this an auspice of what would come
After the hush of the rifle and drum,
When war and its horrors had passed away,
Commingled as one the blue and the gray.
With a bill, hip, hip,
Joined in to rebuild what the war let slip?
Was this a lesson of life to be Taught to men by the small chicadee,
After the battle of Newbern?

GERONIMO'S FIRST FAME

A FIERCE AND BLOODY FEUD FOUGHT OUT.

Gen. Howard's Treaty with Cochise -Death of Skin-yea-Geronimo Flies to the Sierra Madres, After Raiding in Arizona and New Mexico.

Most of the readers of THE TIMES have become very familiar with the name of Geronimo, the proprietor of which is that famous Apache renegade now imprisoned upon a military reservation in Florida. Very few, however, know just when and how this desperate Indian first made himself conspicuous in his bloody role.

The Chiricahua branch of the Apache tribe of Indians had for many years made their home in the Dragoon and Chiricahua Mountain ranges in Southeastern Arizona, and old Co-chise was their chief. Cochise was an intelligent, vigorous, dauntless fellow, who made his prowess respected to keep the treaty a fine-looking squad. They had learned enough of company drill and the manual of arms to make a creditable military appearance. The citizens of Tucson were so well pleased with their deportment that a popular purse was subscribed to supply the company with uniforms—and a striking uniform it was. Red fiannel shirts, white duck pants neatly tucked into the leggings of their moccasins, surmounted by a black felt hat—add to these a belt of cartridges, a needle gun and a swarthy savage, and you certainly have a grotesque picture.

Finally all preliminaries were completed and the warriors started eastward on the trail to Apache Pass. It was the afternoon of June 3d when they arrived at Sulphur Springs, the scene of Pion-se-nay's recent murders. The Chiricahuas, from surrounding peaks, had been watching the approach of the invaders with much interest. The crisis had been reached. The next day Agent Clum and his guards, supported by the troops, would be upon them. Skin-yea and his brother Plon-se-nay insisted that the entire tribe take the warpath and fight to the bitter end. Tah-zay and his brother stoutly opposed them. These young sons of Cochise said they had sworn to their father on his deathbed, to keep the treaty he had made—and Southwestern New Mexico, leaving a trail of blood in his wake. Troops were constantly following him, but he succeeded in evading the most active pursuit until he was finally overtaken, captured and placed in irons by Agent Clum and his Indian scouts. This capture occurred at Ojo Callente, N. M., 60 miles west of the Rio Grande, on April 20, 1877.

At that time Geronimo and seven other renegades were ironed and carried in wagons from Ojo Caliente, N.

about 500 miles, where they were safely deposited by Agent Clum in the agency guardhouse. It may be of interest to mention here that in September.
1876, Tah-zay, the eldest son of Cochise, and a score of other leading Apache spirits, came east with Agent
Clum to visit the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia. While at Washington the young chief was stricken with pneumonia, and, after a brief illness, died. His remains were decently prepared for burial after the customs of the paleface. The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Rankin of the Congregational Church, and 6 Gen. O. O. Howard was present and made appropriate remarks to the Indians, who remembered him as the great soldier who had made the treaty with the dead man's father four years previous. The remains were conveyed to the Congressional Cemetery, and all that was mortal of Tah-zay now lies on equal ground with some of the Nation's brightest spirits, whose ashes have found a final resting place within a common inclosure overlooking the eastern branch of the historic Potomac.

BELOW THE SEA LEVEL. A Remarkable Valley-In Perpet ual Sunshine.

One of the most interesting spots in many respects to be found in California is the Conchilla or Indio Valley, in the Colorado Desert. In going from Los Angeles by the Southern Pacific Railway, one descends from Banning, where the elevation is over 2500 feet, into a valley nearly 300 feet below the sea level. There are but few such depressions as this to be found on the globe, and none other possessing its climatic peculiarities. It is inclosed on either side and at the western end by mountains, with a narrow divide, by mountains, with a narrow divide, the San Gorgonio pass, through which the railway enters the valley. At the head of this remarkable valley two peaks rise, one on each side, to the height of 10,500 feet and 11,500 feet respectively, which are covered most of the year with snow. They overlook the desert as it stretches away to the Colorado River, more than 160 miles distant, and far beyond into Old Mexico. At Indio the valey is about 18 miles in width, and gradually widens as one travels eastwardly. The San

That night the Indians gathered for council in a deep vafion, illuminated by a great camp-fire. That bitter enmity which had for two years been smouldering in the breasts of these it two families of savages was here to seek and find its ultimate and extreme a satisfaction in blood and death. The council began and the hot blood of the indian was soon beyond control. The sharp crack of the rifle rang down the mountain side and the fierce yell of the Apache proclaimed the deadly strife. This fearful test was finally to decide who was fittest to succeed the dead chieftain—his sons or his war

In 1872, Gen. O. O. Howard went, with a single aide, into Cochise's stronghold, in the Dragoon range, and here succeeded in making a treaty of peace with the venerable chief, which was faithfully regarded by him till the day of his death, which occurred in 1874. Since that time a new county has been organized in Southeastern Arizona, which is called Cochise county, after this famous Indian

At this time the principal Apache agency was located on the Gila River at San Carlos, where the Indians of three reservations had been concentrated under the efficient direction of Mr. John P. Clum, the agent in charge. In May, or about a month after the outbreak, the Indian Office ordered Agent Clum to take his Indian police, proceed to Apache Pass, arrest the renegades and remove the entire tribe of Chiricahuas to San Carlos.

It was late in May when Agent

Cochise left two sons, Tahzay and Nachee. After the death of their father, a bitter rivalry sprung up between Tahzay and Skin-yea, head war chief under Cochise, as to who should succeed Cochise as chief. The civil authorities decided in favor of Tahzay, and this created an enmity which, as we shall see, culminated in mortal combat.

It was at this time that Geronimo appeared upon the scene. Accompanied by Hoo and Nolgee, he sought the Agent for a consultation. He related how he and his people had joined with Cochise in the Howard treaty, and now that the young chiefs were going to San Carlos the Southern Chiricahuas desired to go there also. His families, however, were some thirty miles distant, down near the Mexican line, and he only desired permission to go and bring them in. After carefully questioning this wily savage, the agent gave him the desired permit. There was something, however, in Geronimo's was something, however, in Geronimo's conduct that did not inspire complete confidence, and his movements were shadowed by the Agent's scouts.

Geronimo went direct to his camp, which in fact was only about 10 miles distant from Apache Pass. At once the camp was the scene of active but cautious preparations for a rapid march. Every bit of superfluous camp equipage was cast aside. The feeble or disabled animals were turned adrift in an unfrequented caffor and the dogs were quickly slaughtered, lest their bark should betray the secret camp of the savage. As soon as these preparations were completed the Southern Chiricahuas, with Geronimo in command, moved at a rapid pace

It was late in May when Agent Clum arrived in Tucson from San Carles with a bodyguard of 60 stalwart Apache police. They remained in Tucson several days, awaiting the arrival of Gen. August V. Kautz, commanding the troops ordered in the field to assist Agent Clum in case of war.

Jacinto range, which stretches along the southern side of the valley for probably 75 miles, sbruptly terminating long before it reaches the Colorado River, is composed principally of granitic rocks. The formation of the San Bernardino range, on the northern side, is largely igneous and metamorphic. This valley is the western terminus of the great Colorado Desert.

The rainfall is very slight, seldom exceeding an inch in a year. Terrific thunder storms gather in the mountains on either side of the valley, resulting in cloud-bursts, which send torrents of water down the caffons, and sometimes carry boulders a mile or two into the valley, but no sooner do the clouds strike the dry atmosphere of the desert than they are dissolved into invisible air. The atmosphere is exceedingly dry, and when dissolved into invisible air. The atmosphere is exceedingly dry, and when the mercury rises to considerably over 100°, no particular inconvenience, is experienced. It has been known to reach 180° Fahr, in the shade, but even then men work in the salt fields and elsewhere without cover.

This depression bears unmistakable evidence of having been a vast freshwater sea. The surface is covered with millions of fossil fresh-water shells. I collected six species, ranging from muscles three inches in length to minute periwinkles scarcely the sixteenth of an inch long, the names of which would probably not interest the general reader. Grains of yellow mica are intermingled with yellow mica are intermingled with the soil, causing the surface, in some places, to glitter like burnished gold. On the south side of the valley, nearly 100 feet above the plain, the old ocean shore line may be distinctly old ocean shore line may be distinctly traced for many miles. The fragmentary blocks of granite which have fallen as talus are covered with a singular calcareous incrustation as high up as this water line, looking something like coral. Good water can be obtained in this valley from 10 to 100 feet feet below the surface and flowing wells at about 400 feet.

Experiments are now making in fruit raising. It is already demonstrated that grapes will ripen in from tions were completed the Southern Chiricahuas, with Geronimo in command, moved at a rapid pace toward the Mexican line and thence into the Sierra Madre Mountains, which, for years after, became the stronghold of renegades.

The departure of Geronimo was at once reported to Agent Clum, who immediately requested Gen. Kautz to send troops to bring back or punish the fleeing Indians. Maj. Morrow, who was stationed in the San Simon Valley, just east of Apache Pass, with three companies of troops and a company of Indian scouts, was ordered in pursuit, and, although he took up the trail immediately, and followed rapidly into Mexico, Geronimo succeeded in making good his escape, with all his families and effects.

These events introduced Geronimo to the country as a renegade. For months after he would sally forth at irregular intervals from the rocky fastnesses of the Sierra Madres on his raids through Southeastern Arizona cances." They are in a constant state of eruption, boiling and seething day and night, and emitting volumes of steam. While they are objects of great interest, yet, owing to the treacherous character of the surface crust about them, none dare venture very close to them. Without great care one is liable to break through and be precipitated into the boiling cauldron within.

A considerable portion of the valley is covered with brush or chaparral, of several varieties, and "arrow weed." The most valuable native growth is the mesquit tree, two varieties of which flourish here. They furnish food for the Indians as well as for their stock. But of this I will speak in my coucluding letter. The most remarkable native growth is a species of palm. The principal groves are found along the toothills on the north side of the vales. There is a small grove only about rey. There is a small grove only about five miles from Indio Station, and two

But that which is to make this valley flowers, and give it a world-wide reputation above everything else, in my jundgment, is the healthgiving properties of its climate. For certain forms of heart disease, pulminary affections, catarh, rheumatism, asthma and some other diseases, it is likely to excel. Some are living here who declare that they cannot exist elsewhere, and all who have tried it, as far as I could learn, have much to say in its praise. The locality is attracting the attention of eminent physicians, and I shall not be surprised to learn in a few years hence that it has developed into the great sanitarium of the Pacific Coast.

Names of Streets ANGELES, June 20 .- [To the Editor of THE TIMES.] Permit me to suggest, through your columns, that suggest, through your columns, that as our splendid city slowly but surely assumes her metropolitan garb, it might be well to pay some attention to the names of our business thoroughfares. A change in the name of "Main" street is now almost essential. It is a provincialism of the rankest kind, and, to keep pace with the progress of the city in other things, it should be dropped, and a newer title adopted that would be at once euphonious, and of more commercial significance. Or, some distinguished man, or family, 'n our midst, whose identity is closely woven in the history of Los Angeles, might be endowed with the new honor of having the handsome highway named for him or them. Call it "State," "Market," "Fremont," "Bond," "Broad" or "Sansome," anything but "Main," or "Chestmal." It is a change that will cost but a few paltry dollars, and will relieve us of the odium of "commonplace" that ait taches to mining camps, hamlets and Judge Ch. Now the question arises, Who are "reckless people." the cable-car company running its cars without safety or the foot passengers who are guards, of the foot passengers who are obliged to crowd together in certain places on our streets where so much noise from every source so constantly exists as to make it impossible to heed the significance of each distinct one? You say "every precention is taken

You say "every precaution is taken by the railroad people;" but the only perfect precaution and security against the loss of life is the safety guard, and the city should insist upon the cable cars being supplied with it. In less than 90 days, a mangled corpse—a victim to a neglect of supplying the victim to a neglect of supplying the cars with guards—will start every newspaper in the city demanding the guards. Why not have the guards first and save the life?

Society should shun them as moral lepers and individuals avoid them, hasten from their contaminating presence as the eagle would instantly fly from a stench-ladened atmosphere where buzzards congregate. Their characters are so obnoxious that they are known to all men. The grizzled countenance and hang-dog expression is as unmistakable as the brand of the murderer. They never utter, write or print a kind word of their betters, except with sinister motives. Their lives are but a putrid excresence to be tolerated by the community cursed by their presence, until death comes as a kind relief and perdition has received its own.

The bilious idiot does not say whether he was kicked off the downy cushions of a brake-beam into Bakersfield, but whether it was in search of congenial companionship or not, he certainly must have confined his investigations to the neighborhood of Chinatown.

Chinatown.

The unfortunate who is thus roundly rated had merely said that the merchants of Bakersfield were not particularly enterprising. That is why the Bakersfield man got out and t'umped him.—[Oakland Tribune.

A PLEASANT STORY OF A BRAVE

Poem on California-How a Convict Was Caught-Quick-witted Jack-In the Dark Cellar-The Eyes at the Window.

"O, Jack, what's that noise?" asked Polly, suddenly, as a stone rattled away from under the window.

"O, it's a mouse, very likely," replied Jack, as he gave a vigorous stir to the bubbling molasses. Then his eyes wandered to Peggy's face—the dear little sister who was his pet and darling, who stood with colorless cheeks and terror-filled eyes, staring at the coothills on the north side of the values.

There is a small grove only about the miles from Indio Station, and two or three miles further are the "Thousand Palms."

The tree attains a heighth of from 20 to 40 feet, and the body reaches two and a half feet in diameter. This beautiful palm is known to botanists as Washingtonia flifera. About 300 of these trees have escaped the vandaism of visitors, who, from mere wantonness, set fire to the apron of dry leaves that covers the upper portion of the body like a sheathjust simply to see them burn. Unless some protection can be afforded those lingering remnants of a most ancient forest, the only natural growth of the kind left in the United States will be a thing of the past. The soil where they grow is covered with sulphate of soda.

But that which is to make this valley flowers, and give it a world-wide reputation above everything else, in my jundgment, is the healthgiving properties of its climate. For certain forms of heart disease, pulminary affections, catarh, rheumatism, asthma and some other diseases, it is likely to excel. Some are living here who declare that they cannot exist elsewhere, and all who have tried it, as far as I could learn, have much to say in its praise. The locality is attracting the attention of eminent physicians, and I shall not be surprised to learn in a few years hence that it has developed into the great sanitarium of the Pacific Coast.

Stephen Boweiss.

The children all stood dumb with surprise and terror as they saw the door, which they had thought so securely fastened, swing open on its hinges, admitting the form of the intruder.

man.

But Jack was no coward, and in a moment he recovered himself, and as the man advanced to the center of the room he looked up coolly and said:

"Who are you and what do you want?"

"Who I am is none of yer business. But what I want is something to eat and drink, and that mighty quick, too, do yer hear?" replied the man.

"Well, I don't mind giving you something to eat, if you promise to get out then," said Jack.

"I promises nothing, but you just hustle and get me some supper if you know what is good for yourselves."

Jack's mind was very active, and he well knew the danger there was to them all with this desperate man under their roof, for he had read the description of the curvict and knew from that that it was he who had thrust himself into the midet of their happy evening. He looked in the looked of the window, and at Peggy, who was clinging to her dress and looking up with frightened eyes into the face of the man, and a quick inspiration flashed into his thoughts and at once his plan of action was fully determined upon.

For one thing Jack was a wonderful ventriloquist. He had the power of throwing his voice so that it seemed to come from far away corners, and then sometimes it would sound close behind come from far away corners, and then sometimes it would sound close behind one, and then it would be on the right or left, or then perhaps a few steps in advance. O, it was a queer voice that of Jack's, and he could disguise it so that it sounded as if many different people were talking.

people were talking.
So Jack sent his voice away, and the convict heard some one saying softly out on the porch, as it seemed, "I think out on the porch, as it seemed, "I think the fellow's in here. We'll have him yet. You stand here, Tom and Dick, with your guns covering the door, and Jerry and Sam, you take the other door, and if he tries to escape you needn't hesitate to use your guns. They'll settle him, I guess."

The trembling convict heard, and he rushed up queckly yet noiselessly to hesitate to use your guns. They'll settle him, I guess."

The trembling convict heard, and he rushed up quckly yet noiselessly to Jack, and said in a hurriedly panting tone, "Boy, save me, hide me quickly. You shall be safe it you'll do it, and I promise I won't touch a hair of these children's heads." "This way, then, and don't be slow," said Jack, as he lifted the trap door which led into a granite-walled cellar; "you'll be safe enough here, for a time anyhow."

With a quick rush the man darted down the stairway, and Jack dropped the heavy door and locked it fast. Then he went back to Henry and whispered softly, "Run over to the Blacks and tell them we've got the convict fast in the cellar, and tell him to ride to town as quick as possible for an officer; then you come back and bring the hired man with you, and meanwhile I'll keep up my talk outside."

Away ran Henry without any second bidding, while Jack kept those mysterious voices busy without. The prisoner in the cellar could hear them, and he, fully believing there was an officer with a posse of men at his command waiting to capture him, crouched tremblingly in a far corner of the dark cellar, wondering how far he could trust the boy who had hidden him.

In half an hour more an officer with his men was there in earnest, and in a few minutes they had taken their prisoner away heavily ironed. The hired man and his wife came over to stay with the children for the rest of the night. The next day their parents returned, and when Jack's father learned of Jack's coolness and bravery in the face of such danger, he showed his pleasure and his pride by purchasing for Jace the finest saddle horse to bought in the county. And I think brave Jack deserved it, do you not children?

Fashion Not Always Taste-Differ

now worn demands such an arrangement, and present indications are that the Psyche knot with its absurd little frizzly curls will give way to the Catogan loop, which is a double pleat of hair diversified by soft curls and puffs reaching from the crown of the head to the neck. Apropos of hair-dressing, one of the prettiest and most acceptable presents that can be given to a bride is a jeweled pin or comb for the hair. There are many designs, and all very beautiful, stars and butterflies being in the ascendancy, as, indeed, they should be.

From hair-dressing to hats is a natural sequence, is it not? And, as I have heretofore told you a little about hair-dressing, I am now going to tell you something about hats.

And first as to the fashions of the present moment in San Francisco.

And first as to the fashions of the present moment in San Francisco. The most popular hat this summer is the narrow-brimmed, low-crowned straw, called the "dude" hat; it is faced with velvet and is trimmed with a band and clustered bows of polkadot ribbon. This popular hat is pretty, light and comfortable, and looks well with summer dresses.

Another popular shape is the Senorita, which has no brim, but consists of a flat crown raised upon a band fitting the head. This shape is lined with velvet, and is trimmed with ribbon bows brought well forward, and sheltering a spray of flowers, rosebuds, daisies or field-flowers, some of which are also used for face-trimming, a charming setting indeed for a pretty face.

thing in the water. The fish soon shows signs of distress and dies, or comes gasping to the surface. If, on the contrary, it is supplied with certain algae, known to the aquarium-makers, it is perfectly content.

The Santa Monica aquarium could in a few months after completion be stocked with strange fish from India, China, Japan and all the ports of the South Pacific, and present attractions that would make its name known all over the world. It is thought that the entire aquarium tanks, iron work, glass, etc., can be made or obtained in Los Angeles, a fact which speaks well for our industries.

Broad-brimmed hats of black Brussel material much worn; the net is shirred over the brim and sprays of gay flowers adorn the crown. There are, besides these, pretty little turbans of dotted net, with clusters of marge the brim; and also dainty creations of either old-rose or green, the two colors ving in popular favor this season.

So much for San Francisco fashions in the summer of 1889, all of which seem to us pretty and artistic; but, by way of contrast, let us now take a glance back at some of the queer fashions of years ago, for, fantastic as some of the methods of arranging the harm whose breath would drive away hats have certainly kept pace with them.

Of all the freaks of fashion, perhaps the most absurb in the way of a hat was the steeple-cap and its predecessor, the horned head-dress.

With the steeple-cap we are somewhat familiar, as it is still worn by the peasantry of Normandy. It is a tall cap, three or four feet high, steeple-shaped, made of dark or light cloth, embroidered or plain, and has a veil of gauze affixed to its summit, and falling thence almost to the feet of the wearer in the back. This steeple-cap was the natural outcome of the horned head-dress, which consisted of a golden caul or net drawn tightly over the head, to which were fastened side ornaments shaped just like cow's horns, and extending beyond the head about 12 or 14 inches. To these horns was fastened a veil stretched out by wires and falling over the back, part of the head-dress, "so strangely and fearfully made," excited the ire of the satirists of the day to an irre-pressible pitch. The ladies were de-clared to carry about with them the outward and visible sign of the father of all evil. But, as usual, nothing that could be sung, said or written had any effect upon the fair sex; they still continued to wear their horns in spite of all remonstrance, and true to the old adage that, "If a woman will, she will, you may depend on",

"It a woman won't, on't, and there's an And if she won't, she won't, and there's an

But, as in a world of change, all things must change, so after a while the horned head-dress became a thing of the past.

Some very queer bonnets were worn in America about the time of the Revin America about the time of the revolution. Among them was the "calash" bonnet, made of green silk, formed into a shape like the hood of a carriage, and held in front by a string in the hand of the wearer.

Closely related to the "calash" was the "wagon" bonnet, which was shaped like the top of a Jersey wagon, and another odd shape was the "muskmelon" bonnet, with whalebone stiffeners so arranged in the crown that it exactly resembled the rind of a muskmelon.

Well, these are only a few of the odd styles worn at different periods, old fashions which seem to us very curi-ous and ridiculous, but doubtless were considered quite pretty and at 1850. In their day, just as we consider our own hats to be, we in our turn to be laughed at by future generations. Lou. considered quite pretty and artistic in COLLEGE GATHERINGS STILL IN HIGH FAVOR.

How the Close of the Scholastic Year Is Celebrated-M. of A. Dance - Archibald Reception-Notes from Ventura, Alhambra and Coronado.

One of the most recherche social events of the college year of the University of Southern California was the annual reception given by the young lady members of Delta Gamma frater-nity on the 15th inst., at 537 Jefferson street. The lawn and piazzas were illuminated with many-colored Chinese lanterns. Indoors the large house was decorated with palms, roses and magnolias. About 100 guests, including the faculty, were present in full evening dress in honor of the occasion, as the Delta Gammas comprise many of the most popular young lady students of the university.

The new college chapter of the Sigma Chi was out in full force. The little Misses Ada Shrader and Carrie Thomson, attired in ceil blue and pink, received many encomiums for the graceful manner in which they attended the guests to the various dressing-rooms. In the parlors the Delta Gammas, many attired in ceil blue, received the guests with a girlish frankness and hospitality that won all hearts. Rev. A. J. Frost, D.D., of San Bernardino, took a large audience to the Yosemite Valley, Friday evening, promising to have them there and back in an hour. He stayed a little overtime, but as his charge for the round trip was only 25 cents and the proceeds for the benefit of the Alhambra Baptist Church, no one grumbled. The Doctor is as nimble as he is immense in stature and being familiar with every stature and being familiar with every stature. is as nimole as he is immense in stature, and being familiar with every step of the way, guided his steps up the perpendicular sides of 3000-feet rocks and 1600-feet waterfalls with the greatest celerity, stopping only occasionally to run over the catechism. The lecture was both interesting and instructive.
